Fleet Activities Yokosuka Standdown Prepares Personnel for a Safe Holiday Season

By MC2 Quinton A. Lee, CFAY Public Affairs

Fleet Activities Yokosuka personnel gathered at Fleet Theater Nov. 20 for a holiday safety standdown focused on cooking, decorating, driving and travel. Presenters covered how to stay safe at home and on the road through Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's.

Kitchens were the first concern. Thanksgiving is the peak day for home cooking fires, according to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA). Unattended cooking is the leading factor in those fires.

Presenters reminded personnel to stay in the kitchen while cooking and to turn off the stove when leaving. They also recommended using a timer and keeping a 3-foot zone around the stove clear of children.

Naval Safety Command's Thanksgiving guidance adds several steps. Cooks should turn pot handles toward the back of the stove and keep dish towels and loose sleeves away from burners. A pan lid or baking sheet kept nearby can cover a pan that catches fire.

The guidance also warns never to put water on a grease fire. Anyone frying a turkey should thaw it completely, use the correct amount of oil and monitor the oil temperature. Cooks should keep a working fire extinguisher on hand.

The standdown also addressed heaters and decorations. Portable space heaters need 3 feet of clearance. Installation facilities must get fire department approval to use one.

Christmas trees should be fresh, kept in water and placed away from heat. They should never block an exit.

NFPA recommends replacing any light string with a damaged cord or loose bulbs. Residents should switch off lights and decorations at bedtime and whenever they leave home.

For outdoor displays, NFPA advises using only lights rated for outdoor use. Residents should hang them with clips instead of nails, which can damage cords.

Housing officials allow holiday decorations and exterior lights 30 days before and 15 days after recognized holidays and events. Decorative lights may stay on from dusk until 10 p.m.

On the road, presenters called texting the most hazardous distraction because it takes a driver's eyes, hands and mind off the task.

CFAY officials also urge anyone going out to celebrate to plan a ride home before the first drink. Options include a designated driver, a taxi or the train.

Japan's legal limit for drivers is a blood alcohol content of 0.03 percent. Most U.S. states set the limit at 0.08 percent.

Drivers in an accident must stay at the scene until released by security or investigating officers. They must also render aid, exchange information and show their U.S. Forces Japan Form 4EJ license.

Off the installation, drivers should call the Japanese police at 110, and 119 if someone is hurt, then notify CFAY Security. Failing to report an accident can mean up to a six-month license revocation.

For holiday travel, presenters urged personnel to update DoD Alert!, the emergency notification system, with a personal cellphone number and email address before going on leave.

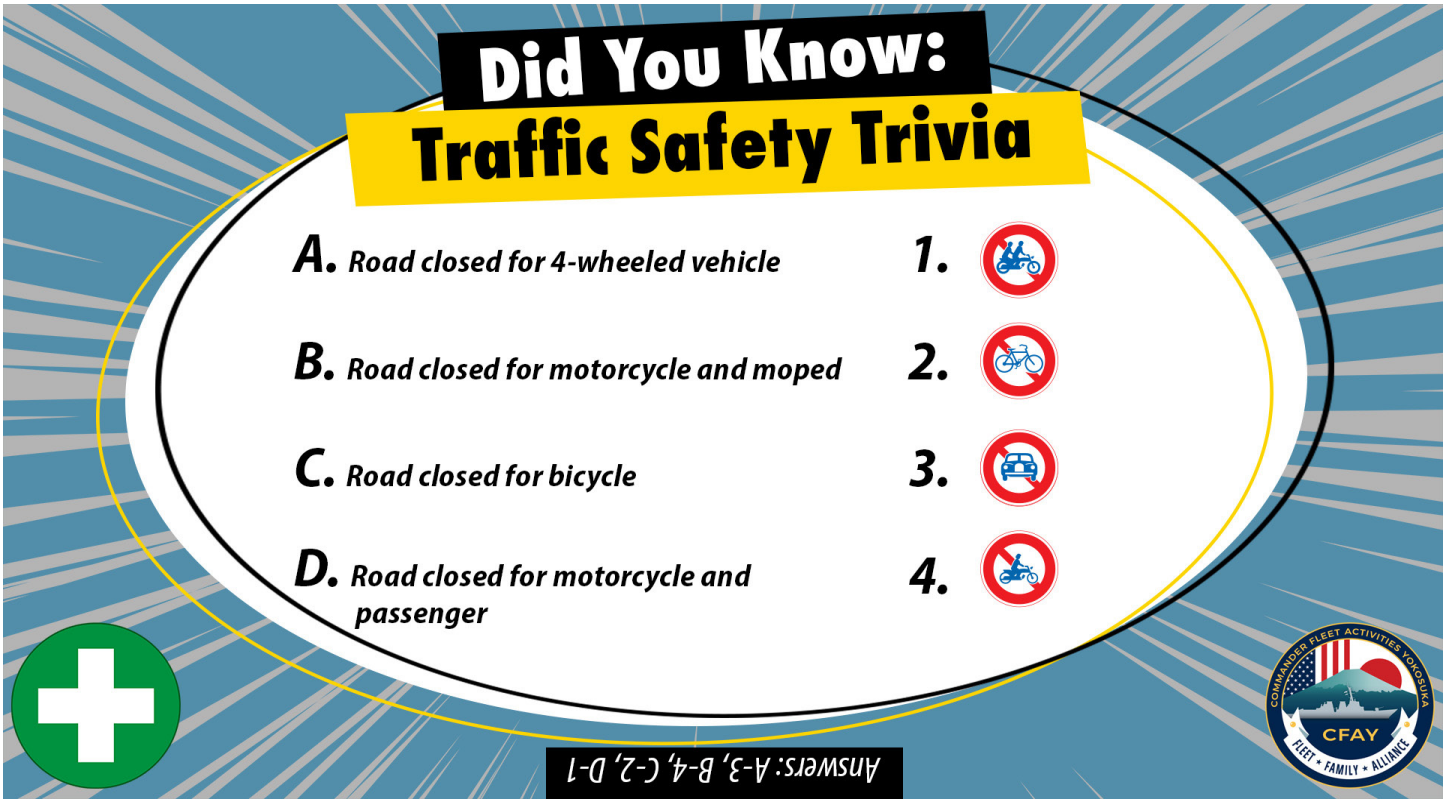

Those traveling outside Japan should enroll their trips in the State Department's Smart Traveler Enrollment Program. The free service sends alerts from the nearest U.S. embassy or consulate.

Travelers should pack a vehicle emergency kit, name an out-of-area contact and carry key phone numbers on paper. Naval Safety Command also recommends checking tires and the vehicle battery before a winter road trip. Drivers should check weather reports and let someone know when they leave.

Residents who leave quarters unoccupied for more than seven days must submit a Temporary Absence from Quarters form to the Housing Service Center.

Personnel planning a road trip can use Naval Safety Command's Travel Risk Planning System, known as TRiPS. The tool offers driving-risk resources and weather and hazard updates.

TRiPS is available at https://trips.safety.army.mil. First-time registration requires a Common Access Card. More holiday safety resources are available at https://navalsafetycommand.navy.mil.

Fortifying the Fleet: Surface Force Leaders Visit Commands Across the Pacific

Courtesy story Commander, Naval Surface Force, U.S. Pacific Fleet

U.S. Navy Vice Adm. Joe Cahill, Commander, Naval Surface Force, U.S. Pacific Fleet (CNSP), and Force Master Chief Damiean Williams concluded a multi-region tour across the Indo-Pacific region, Nov. 13.

Over the two-week itinerary, leadership visited four key locations: Naval Station Everett, Washington; Fleet Activities Yokosuka, Japan; Fleet Activities Sasebo, Japan; and Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, Hawaii.

Throughout the trip, Cahill and Williams addressed the full spectrum of surface force readiness, examining personnel, material and training for warships; medical facilities for Sailors and their families; unaccompanied and family housing, and family support networks. The tour focused on ensuring Sailors and their families have the tools, infrastructure, support and quality-of-life resources necessary to sustain operational excellence.

"There is simply no substitute for engaging with our surface forces in person and across the Pacific," said Williams, marking the trip as his first regional engagement as force master chief. "Stepping onto the deckplates and into our communities allows us to hear directly from our Sailors and their families. Understanding their day-to-day challenges enables us to advocate effectively on their behalf. When our warfighters know leadership is listening and their families are supported, our fleet is ready to fight and win."

The trip commenced Nov. 2 at Naval Station Everett, where the leaders visited the Arleigh Burke-class guided-missile destroyers USS Benfold (DDG 65) and USS Gridley (DDG 101) to discuss material and crew readiness with Sailors and leadership. Cahill and Williams also attended the re-establishment ceremony for Shore Intermediate Maintenance Activity (SIMA) Everett. The reopening marks a critical milestone in reviving organic technical expertise, maintenance capacity, and self-sufficiency for the fleet.

"SIMA Everett delivers world-class technical training directly to our Sailors, translating skilled maintenance into sustained combat readiness for Pacific Northwest warships," Cahill said. "Through hands-on instruction, our Sailors develop the advanced competencies required to troubleshoot complex systems independently and keep our ships ready."

Traveling next to Japan, the CNSP leadership team engaged with forward-deployed naval forces (FDNF) in Yokosuka and Sasebo, visiting ships, meeting with commanders, touring family support facilities, and speaking directly with family members.

U.S Navy Vice Adm. Joseph Cahill, commander, Naval Surface Force, U.S. Pacific Fleet (CNSP), center, visits Sailors aboard Whidbey Island-class dock landing ship USS Rushmore (LSD 47), Nov. 10, 2026. While aboard Rushmore, Cahill spoke with command leadership and recognized Sailors for their excellent performance and team cohesion in keeping the warship battle-ready as part of the U.S. Navy's only forward-deployed amphibious squadron based out of Sasebo, Japan. CNSP's mission is to support combatant commanders and Navy commanders by providing combat-ready Naval Surface Forces which are forward deployable, fully trained, properly manned, capably equipped, well maintained, and combat sustainable. In Yokosuka, leadership visited the guided-missile destroyer USS Preble (DDG 88). In Sasebo, they toured the amphibious assault ship USS Tripoli (LHA 7), amphibious transport dock USS New Orleans (LPD 18), dock landing ship USS Rushmore (LSD 47), and mine countermeasures ship USS Patriot (MCM 7). During the shipboard engagements, Cahill and Williams spoke with the crews and leaders, toured the ships and presented awards to outstanding Sailors and in recognition of their operational excellence.

"Seeing the exceptional teamwork, dedication, and warfighting cohesion aboard our forward-deployed ships in Japan makes it clear why our surface force remains unmatched," Williams said. "These teams operate daily at the tip of the spear. Their vigilance, interoperability, and steady professionalism ensure the combat readiness of our surface force."

Cahill and Williams also visited medical facilities – including U.S. Naval Hospital Yokosuka and Branch Health Clinic Sasebo – to evaluate healthcare access that is key to ensuring fleet resilience. Additionally, they visited unaccompanied and family housing, where they received updates on quality-of-life programs and accommodations that are directly tied to Sailor retention, morale, and combat readiness.

The leaders focused on the community support networks vital to forward-deployed personnel and their families, touring Department of Defense Education Activity (DoDEA) schools and Child Development Centers. The leaders also held coffee talks and roundtables with families in both Yokosuka and Sasebo and met with command ombudsmen. The engagements allowed the leaders to hear directly families and address any concerns.

“Our families are a vital part of the warfighting team, and robust support structures are essential to enabling our Sailors to perform at their best,” Cahill noted. “When Sailors know their loved ones are supported back home, they can stay completely focused on demanding forward missions. Taking care of our families is not separate from fleet readiness; it is fundamental to it.”

The final stop brought leadership to Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, where Cahill and Williams joined families on the pier to welcome home the crew of USS Michael Murphy (DDG 112) on Nov. 13 following an 11-month deployment to the U.S. 3rd, 7th, and 5th Fleet areas of operations. During the deployment, Michael Murphy executed sustained combat operations in support of Operation Epic Fury.

"The extraordinary performance of this crew over an incredibly demanding eleven-month deployment represents the very best of our Surface Force,” said Cahill. “Their success is a testament not only to their own tireless work and profound sacrifice, but also to the unwavering strength of the families who supported them from home.” Spanning Naval Station Everett, Fleet Activities Yokosuka, Fleet Activities Sasebo, and Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, the two-week itinerary connected CNSP leadership directly with Sailors, commanders, and families stationed throughout the Pacific theater.

The direct engagement provided leadership with first-hand knowledge of the operational and personal challenges facing surface forces today. The tour reinforced that warfighters and their families remain the foundational strength of the fleet enables the force to maintain its competitive edge.

“At every single stop across this theater, we saw cohesive teams meeting demanding operational commitments and technical challenges head-on and I was struck by the extraordinary character and dedication of the Sailors and families who sustain our surface fleet,” Cahill said. “Witnessing their resolve firsthand, their relentless professionalism and determination gives me complete confidence in our force’s ability to meet any operational demand.”

CNSP’s mission is to support combatant commanders and Navy component commanders by providing combat-ready Naval Surface Forces which are forward deployable, fully trained, properly manned, capably equipped, well maintained, and combat-sustainable.
